MAPAE GRANT

The Korean War Legacy Foundation is honored to have a cadre of dedicated educators sharing resources produced by the foundation to teachers throughout the world. To recognize the outstanding work of these teachers, the Mapae Grant was created.

The Mapae medal is based on the medallion used by officials of the central government during the Joseon Dynasty (1392-1910). The King's hand-picked special officials who ranked "Number One" in the nation's civil service exam during Joseon Dynasty, called "Eosa" (literally meaning the official dispatched by the King), traveled through regional areas on public duties and primarily prosecuted corrupt officials in the provinces. Eosa with Mapae were allowed to have special access to saddle horses kept at government-run post stations upon presenting their Mapae medal.

Similar to the Joseon officials, teachers who, first, were trained at a KWLF function and have been awarded the medal will be provided resources based on the number of horses on their medal. The goal of the Mapae Grant is to help educators share the knowledge about Korean history, South Korea's simultaneous rapid economic development and democratization, and the Korean War with their colleagues. Foundation staff are available to assist teachers in developing their grants which may include workshops, classroom projects, or school events. All completed Mapae Grants are published on the Foundation's website.
